

New retail and restaurants now open at Will Rogers World Airport

The opening of a local breakfast restaurant, Hatch, in January marks the completion of concession renovations at Will Rogers World Airport (OKC).

The Airport's new dining program and the concession renovation is a collaboration between airport staff and Paradise-Lagardere, the airport's concessionaire. The collection of world-class dining partnered with the local flare of retail shops is a hit with travelers.

"The airport was negotiating a new concessions contract when COVID spread and passenger traffic reached historic low levels," Assistant Director of Airports, Scott Keith said. "The ability of Paradise-Lagardere to truly partner with OKC to build a first-class concessions program with so much uncertainty about the future, speaks volumes of the character, integrity and work ethic of their staff and organization. In a time when our industry was challenged with unparalleled difficulties, Paradise Lagardere believed in Oklahoma City, and we believed in Paradise Lagardere to develop, lead and manage our new concessions program."

Concession Program

The new concessions program assembles high-quality local and national brands to serve passengers as they travel through Will Rogers World Airport. This provides travelers with the ability to identify, connect and support both local business brands in our community and national brands while at the airport.
